Compassion

Mother Teresa was asked by an interviewer soon after being felicitated with the Nobel Peace Prize how she felt about being conferred with the world's biggest honour. The ever smiling Mother told simply that she considers something else as a bigger honour in her life.

One night, a rickshaw puller in Kolkata came to the doors of Mothers residence and insisted that he be allowed an audience with the mother. The Mother had retired to bed but there was this standing instruction to awaken her should there be an emergency. The sisters at MC politely insisted upon the Visitor to come next morning but no way he was going to leave and kept begging for the audience. At last the sisters gave in and alerted the Mother.

On seeing the Mother, he fell at her feet and profusely apologised for delaying his visit with a purpose. Mother asked, "What is it that you are feeling so sad about". He said, "O Mother, for last many years I have been watching you shower affection and blessings upon so many uncared for children. I have wanted to save some five Rupees to donate for the cause of your charity. But every evening when I return home thinking that next morning I would come and give you, I could not do so as the necessities of daily struggle forced me to spend the saving for my family. Tonight, I resolved to first give you the money before I go home. That's my urgency". He pulled out a Coin from his soiled wear and put it on the Mothers hand.

The Mother thanked him and persuaded him to take the coin back for his poor family's needs but upon his insistence she accepted the donation. This act of charity of the poor man, the Mother rated as an honour much bigger than the Nobel Prize.

One does not have to be wealthy to be compassionate. One has to have a great heart to show real Compassion. How much community service we do is not the measure of our heart but with what spirit we do magnifies our joy in the heart. Let's vow to bear true Compassion in our heart.

MTHR Conclave

An HR Conclave in association with MTHR was organised at Jaipuria School of Business on 12th November, 2016 where HR Leaders and Professional Members of DMTHR were invited. Many HR Professionals from the corporate world attended the event. Reputed companies Baxi, Ginni Filaments, Samsung, Jaro Education, People Talent International, Youth4Work, Infinitum India, Monster, Idea, UFlex, Thomson Digital, NEC, G4S, Pragmatic and many more were represented in the event.

The event commenced with the address by Mr. Rajesh Kamath, Co-Founder MTHR. Mr. Kamath gave a brief introduction of the MTHR Group and explained the purpose of forming the group. The Key Note speaker of the event Mr. Atul Bhatnagar, Board-Advisor, Youth4Work, in his address, emphasised the need of providing skills to the potential workforce.

It was followed by a panel discussion on the topic "Preparing for the Future of Learning: A Changing Perspective for Global Leaders". A lot of doubts and queries, raised by the members, were very well answered by the esteemed panelists. Later, Dr S K Mahapatra, Director, interacted with the members of the group and shared his ideas on taking the mutually beneficial association with MTHR further. The event concluded with a networking session over lunch. The event was organized jointly by the Centre of Leadership Excellence and the Centre for Change and Development
